Patience: Who's He?

The old "bred in the bone" Cornish man of upper Michigan is a character that once met is not soon forgotten. While he has a distinct sense of humor, he is funniest when he least intends to be, and this is due in no small degree to his peculiar dialect, the latter being not only difficult to understand, but still more so to reproduce. The following is typical: The boss went up in a raise where two of his old reliable workmen were drilling greeting them with "Ow she coming up, boys?" "Some slow, cap'n, some slow." "Well," said he, "ne'er mind, patience and perseverance will put us through." And the captain walked on. Said one of the men in the raise, "Enry, wo be this Patience and this Perceverance?" "Blowed if I da know, lest be they taw bluddy Fin landers in tuther stowp."

Half an hour later found Henry and his partner demanding their pay up to date just as the captain stepped into the office. "Well, me sons, what's matter?" "War leavin, cap'n, if yaw dha want they taw bluddy Fin landers to put us through you can ave ey, Patience and Perceverance, ay? You can ave ey, you can ave ey."—Engineering and Mining Journal.

A Grouchy Clerk.

The clerk in the postoffice was grouchy. We suspected that he had been out into the night before, and we trod lightly and spoke gently, but in spite of our decent precautions he snarled at us. We decided that it would be better not to address him at all. So we approached the stamp window at which he presided and mutely pushed two copper pennies across the counter. "Well, what do you want?" he growled, looking at the coppers and then at us. "A house and lot," we stammered, taken off our guard, "but the bedroom windows must face the south, and the garden should."

But he swore brightly and, handing us a two-cent stamp, merely exclaimed: "Get out of the line; there are other customers!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Wily Sexton.

Visitors to the Old North church are shown through the historic old building usually by an elderly man who seems obsessed with a love for the church. His fund of reminiscences is refreshing, and the most interesting thing he recounts is the story of how the lanterns were placed in the belfry. According to his version of the historic incident, the sexton overheard some English officers talking in the house he lived in and immediately hung the lanterns. Returning to his room, he saw that his shoes were caked with mud and hid them, replacing them with a dry pair. The officers, after they learned that a signal had been hung from the belfry, rushed to the room of the sexton, but, finding his shoes dry, became convinced that some one else had hung the lanterns and then locked all the doors of the edifice.—Boston Journal.

Carrying Out Instructions.

"Now, Thomas," said the philosophic father, "you are going out into a new land, where brain and muscle alone count, where ability is the sole passport to success. Make one firm resolution. Come what may, be determined to hold your own."

Some years later the old gentleman paid a visit to his son, who had in the meantime taken unto himself a wife. On entering his son's domicile he found him nursing twins.

"I took your advice, you see, dad," said the younger man.

"What advice?" asked the old philosopher who had forgotten his parting admonition.

"Holding my own," replied the dutiful Thomas.—London Tit-Bits.

Force of Habit.

An actor had the misfortune to fall off a ferryboat at night. Of course there was great confusion on board. The searchlight was turned round and round in an effort to find the man. He came up for the third time just as the light struck him, and from force of habit the actor raised himself and delivered a most strenuous bow. Then the rescuers grabbed him.—Chicago Tribune.

Garrick's Wonderful Face.

Garrick had a poor opinion of the French actors of his day, and when in Paris for six months in 1763 to show what he could do without the aid of the usual accessories of the stage he gave private performances to audiences that quickly succumbed to the spell of his art. He told stories, gave scenes from Shakespeare and acted dramas in dumb show. There are familiar tales concerning his wonderful mobility of features and body, of his power to "create a new physiognomy which his friends did not recognize." There is the story, for instance, that Garrick posed to Hogarth for the portrait of Fielding after Fielding's death. And there is the other story that in sitting to Reynolds Garrick so completely changed his facial expression three times in succession that the artist, dazed by his brush and declared that he believed "he was painting from the devil." His French admirers were subjected to the same sensations.

His Hold on Fame.

Sir Henry Irving was playing his annual London engagement once when Nansen, then in the height of his fame as an arctic explorer, came back from an expedition in search of the north pole. The curtain was just about to rise one evening when Stoker came behind the scenes with news that Nansen was sitting in the royal box. Irving received the news in silence. A few minutes later one of the members of the company bustled up to the star to tell him the same thing. Irving merely granted. And right on the heels of this up came a fluttering woman sniper and said: "Oh, Sir Henry, did you know the great Nansen was out front?" "Nansen? Nansen?" said Irving as though he were trying to remember who this person Nansen might be. "Oh yes—the chap who stands the cold well!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A Cook's Accidental Discovery.

One of the best ways of cooking potatoes was accidentally discovered through the unavailability of a train. When the line from Paris to St. Germain was opened the first train carried an official party for whom lunch was ordered. The meal was fixed for noon, and shortly before that hour the potatoes were put on to fry. A few minutes afterward a message came that the train would probably be delayed for an hour, so the potatoes were taken off the fire, but left in the pan. Then came a second message, "Train just arriving," and the potatoes were hurriedly put back to fry again. When the party sat down to lunch the potatoes were brought on with the steak. Each chip was then found to be blown out like a small, crisp, golden balloon to the delight of the guests. The cook without knowing it had invented pommes de terre souffles.

Too Far.

The fresh young man seated himself beside a handsome girl on the train. "Going far?" he inquired. "You are, sir, much too far," was the chilling reply. Boston Transcript.

back and pains across my kidneys. The kidney secretions were irregular and unnatural. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Emmel's drug store and they brought me relief. The lameness left and the kidney secretions became natural. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills highly."
